SATURDAY, JUNE 4. 1737.

No. 606.

To PASQUIN, in Common Sense, of May the 21*ſt*.

SIR, June 1, 1737.

IT is of little Importance, either to the Publick, or to the Point between us, whether you are right, or no, in your Conjecture about me; for which Reaſon, without giving you any more Light than you already ſeem to have as to my Perſon, I ſhall conſider the Anſwer your Reſpect (as you are pleaſed to ſay) for me, has made you favour me with, tho' I muſt diſagree with you, in your Quotation of my Lord Shaftesbury's Obſervation: For, I believe, no Private Gentleman that has Common Senſe, is pleaſed with the Beggar's Compliment. He may ſmile indeed at the little Art the Fellow uſes to get a ſmall Alms, and at the Hopes of Succeſs from his Flattery, with which he hugs himſelf: But I am, particularly, ſurprized you ſhould be of that Noble Lord's Opinion, who in the Hiſtorical Regiſter, have repreſented the Parts of the Engliſh Lords to be of ſuch little Conſequence, that no Private Gentleman would care to exchange.

THERE is ſomething peculiarly abſurd (excuſe the Freedom of the Phraſe) in your quoting Ariſtophanes in your own Juſtification; whoſe licentious Abuſe of the State, put the Athenians upon the very Thing our Legiſlature is now paſſing into a Law. Every Body that has the leaſt Acquaintance with Literature, knows what the Vetus Comœdia was; and that the Licentiouſneſs of it took in not only Private Life, and as near as was poſſible, the very exact Figure of Perſons; but expoſed on the Scene, the Principal Men of the Republick by Name. Ariſtophanes carry'd this ſo far, that in a Piece of his, in which he brought the Perſon of Cleon on the Stage, who was a leading Man in Athens, the Actor refuſing to play the Roll, HE himſelf went on and perform'd it. He afterwards brought Lampſacus and Braſidas, nay, Alcibiades and Pericles on the Scene, and treated their Miniſterial Characters, as well as their Private ones, with the ſame Licentiouſneſs. Such was the Intemperance of this, your Model, Sir, that the very beſt, as well as the wiſeſt, Man of all Greece, no leſs than Socrates, was expoſed by him, and thro' his Sides, Morality and Government radically ſtruck at. This Abuſe of Comedy at length ſtirr'd up the Indignation of the Athenians, who thought the Miniſter as well as the Private Man accountable to them for his Actions, and not to the Poet; and finding, as Horace tells us, the Grievance fit to be reſtrained by Law, they did reſtrain it by Law. I ſhall beg Leave to quote the Paſſage, not for your Information, for you cannot be ignorant of it; but to ſhew you, that tho' a wiſe Government may wink at ſmall Abuſes, it never can, when they arrive to a certain Pitch.

Succeſſit vetus, his, Comœdia, non ſine multa - —— Laude; ſed in VITIUM LIBERTAS excidit, & VIM DIGNAM LEGE REGI. LEX EST ACCEPTA, CHORUSQUE TURPITER OBTICUIT, SUBLATO JURE NOCENDI HOR. Ar. Poet.

I BELIEVE, and am confident, the Government had no Thought of veſting any Power in any Great Officers Hands for this Purpoſe, had not you pav'd the Way for the Subverſion of the Stage, by introducing on it Matters quite foreign to its true Object; and by making yourſelf a Tool to the indiſcreet Mirth of ſome Great Men, put Others upon keeping the Stage within its proper Bounds; which is all that is now aim'd at, or really done.

I DO not think, that to ridicule Vice is to ſerve its Cauſe, as you are pleaſed to make me think. But I ſay, that to repreſent Vice in Colours more amiable than its natural ones, is to ſerve its Cauſe. And I dare ſay, there is not one ſingle Perſon that ever went to the Beggars Opera, but who thought of the Characters there repreſented, with much leſs Horror and Averſion, than the ſame Perſon would, and actually does, of the Wretches that go to Tyburn, or the Plantations, tho' there is no Difference but the Poet's Colouring between them. Is this then ridiculing Vice, to make it leſs ſhocking? Surely, the greateſt Advocate for Mr. Gay will not pretend to clear him of this Imputation. Is this ridiculing Vice, to ſhew Corruption, as you have done in Paſquin? This is a familiarizing Corruption, juſt as Mr. Gay familiarized Vice, by taking away all the ODIUM of it.

I SHALL not pretend to make you believe, that it is the Mark of a great Character to be laugh'd at by a whole Kingdom. But I rather think 'tis your Vanity that makes you believe the Caſe was ſo; for by the Moral with which you ſum up your Election, at which the whole Kingdom ſlaugh'd, as you ſay, you plainly tell us, that Better Herring is in neither Barrel.

So that your Great Men and Patrons may have the ſame Pretence to the ſame Greatneſs of Character, by having been equally laugh'd at, in Paſquin, the Hiſtorical Regiſter, and Eurydice hiſs'd; as, if neceſſary, might be ſhewn by Quotations from the two laſt.

EVERY body, Sir, is a Judge of his Heart, and conſcious of his own Obligations, tho' perhaps ſome Perſons may think an Obligation WIPED OFF, by being DISCLAIM'D, after the full Value of it received. Now, tho' I ſhould be very ſorry to hurt you with your Patrons, I muſt, in ſtrict Juſtice, ſhew them, how far they may truſt your Profeſſions of Obligations to them, either made, or to be made; and this from your own Words.

IN your Dedication to the Publick, prefix'd to the Hiſtorical Regiſter, you have this very remarkable Expreſſion, that asking Leave to dedicate, is asking whether you will pay for your Dedication, and in that Senſe you believe it is underſtood by the Authors and Patrons.

IF it is underſtood in that Senſe, all that is ſaid in a Dedication muſt be (to uſe a vulgar Expreſſion) nothing but mere Shop-Language; and if a Nobleman conſents to a Dedication, he muſt conſent to be flatter'd; and if he conſents to be flatter'd, he muſt, according to your own Rule laid down in theſe Words, be a very IMPUDENT, or a very SIMPLE Fellow, or BOTH.

IF I am not very much miſtaken, Sir, you have frequently ask'd Leave to dedicate, upon your own Principle OF BEING PAID FOR IT, and have received the Price of ſeveral Dedications. In return for which Kindneſs, you now publickly tell your Noble Benefactors, that they are very impudent and ſimple Fellows, to have given you Money to have flatter'd them; which heaps this further Folly on your Head, that if you ſhould at any Time (as you have before) enter a Caveat againſt being thought a Flatterer, your own Words will condemn you: And with this, I leave your Patrons to truſt your Profeſſions of Regard and Reſpect for them.

YOU ſeem particularly pleaſed at the Appellation of the Great, the Senſible, and the Witty, with which I characterize your Patrons; but you make a very ungrateful Return for this Conceſſion, by ſuppoſing an Oppoſition of Characters. But of what Advantage to you is all this? Does it reflect any Luſtre on you? Alas! my Friend! Don't you ſee you are nothing but the Cat's Paw! No Office ſurely to be proud of! An Engine, ſupported by them, to beſpatter with! Were you choſen by them for any other Reaſon, but becauſe your licentious Satire pleas'd their Spleen, I would allow the Choice, marking you out as an Object of Merit. But to be ſingled out for a Squirt to throw Filth about —— How ill does this ſuit Horace's Idea of a Poet,

Ingenium cui ſit; Cui Mens divinior atq; os
Magna ſonaturum ---- Des nominis hujus honorem.

I will not cavil with you about Words; you may not perhaps have expreſly ſaid, All Government is but a Farce; but you ſhould have carry'd your Quotation a Word further, and you would have found ——

—— 'TIS ALL A CHEAT;
Some Men play little Farces, and ſome Great.

But the Drift of the Allegory throughout, is too plain to be miſtaken; and you may, if you pleaſe, deny what every Body elſe is convinced of.

YOUR Ideas are, for the moſt Part, Ludicrous, and I cannot help ſmiling with you, at your Conception of the Ambaſſadors in Europe aſſembling all at the Haymarket Houſe, to learn the Character of the Miniſtry. —— But the Misfortune is, you had rather ſay a witty Thing at any time, than a true one; for you ſhould have ſaid, To ſee the Miniſtry expoſed.

As to the very handſome Compliment paid, in your laſt Paragraph, to the Gentlemen in the Oppoſition, I will only ſay, that let their Conſtitution be ever ſo ſound, I dare anſwer for them, they will never ſuffer Ward's Pill, even to be adminiſter'd to them, nor publickly ſet up to Sale, by any Poetical-Anti-Miniſterial-Quack whatever, in their Days.

I am, SIR,
Your unknown and humble Servant,

AN ADVENTURER in POLITICKS.

LONDON.

Letters from Jamaica of the 5th of April laſt by the Becher, Capt. Wade, which arrived from thence at Briſtol the 1ſt Inſt. confirms the Account we gave on Wedneſday laſt of the great Fire at Panama, which City was conſumed in about 5 Hours time, not above 15 Houſes being left ſtanding. The Inhabitants were in great Want of Proviſions, eſpecially Flower, and had wrote to be ſupplied with the ſame from Jamaica, by way of Porto Bello.

By the ſame Conveyance we learn, that they had an Account at Jamaica, by the Maſter of a Coaſting Veſſel, who a few Days before paſſed in Sight of Carthagena in New Spain (an open Road) wher he few at Anchor 7 Sail of large Ships, two whereof he took to be Men of War.

On which 'tis conjectur'd, that they were the Galleons that was arrived there; the Capitana of which Fleet, sailed from Cadiz in Company of three Merchant Ships, one of which, the N. S. de Belem, was lost the next Day, in a Storm near Cadiz; the other Two, viz. the N. S. de los Dolores alias la Princessa, and the Santissima Trimidad y Santiago, put into Algezira, on the West Side of the Bay of Gibraltar, and sailed from thence the 20th of February, under Convoy of the Dreadnought Man of War, Capt. Medley, as far as the Canaries; but the Capitana kept the Sea, and passed the Islands the 10th of the same Month: The Almiranta, with five Merchant Ships, sailed the 7th of February from Cadiz, passed the Canaries the 14th ditto; which last, with the Capitana, are supposed to be the 7 Ships seen at Carthagena.

Yesterday the Honourable House of Commons appointed the Rev. Dr. Denn, Archdeacon of Rochester, and Rector of Shoreditch, to Preach before them in the Parish Church of St. Margaret's Westminster, on Saturday next, being the Day of his Majesty's happy Accession to the Throne.

The same Day both Houses of Parliament adjourn'd to Monday next.

On Tuesday last one Lamb a Waterman, who ply'd at Whitehall, being troubled in Mind, hung himself with his Garters in a Hedge-Bush, near the Rose and Crown in the 5 Fields leading to Chelsea: When he was found, he was on his Knees. The Deceased, we hear, had not been long Married: And Yesterday the Coroner's Jury sate on him, and brought in their Verdict Lunacy.

Charles Dominique, Esq; Member of Parliament for Gatton in Surrey, lies dangerously ill at his Seat near Yewell, in the said County.

Yesterday died at his Lodgings at Newington Butts Phillip Stevens, Esq; lately come to an Estate of 3000 l. per Annum.

Last Night their Graces the Duke and Duchess of Kent came to Town from their Seat at Rest in Bedfordshire.

Yesterday their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales came to St. James's from their House at Kew.

We hear from Donnington in Lincolnshire, that last Saturday a Person, somewhat in Liquor, laid a Wager he could drink 30 Glasses of Ale in 30 Minutes; but upon his drinking the 27th, he dropp'd down dead.

Canterbury, June 1. On Sunday Morning last, one Margaret Wickes, a single Woman, about 22 Years of Age, was committed to his Majesty's Gaol in St. Dunstan's near this City, charged with Suspicion of murdering Lydia Fagg, an Infant of the Age of 18 Months, Daughter of Thomas Fagg, of the Town and Port of Dover, Gent. which on Examination before the Justice of Peace, she hath confessed. The miserable Wretch has only to excuse so barbarous an Action, as she pretends, but that when she was uneasy in her Service, her Mistress would not suffer her to go away. This Maid-Servant got up from the Bed where she lay with the Infant, at her Master's House in Dover, about four o'Clock on Saturday Morning last, and before she went out of the House, as she now says, went up and kiss'd the Child three several Times, and at last took the Child from the Bed, and carry'd her asleep to the Sea-side; when a great Wave wash'd the Child out of her Arms; that she saw the Child struggle several Times, and went into the Sea after it to save it, but could not. But 'tis confidently reported by strong Circumstances, that she flung the Child into the Sea, to be reveng'd of her Mistress. She can give no Reason for carrying the Child so early in the Morning to the Sea-side. This hard-hearted Creature afterwards, instead of going home, rambled about three Miles to St. Margaret's, where she was found, conceal'd in one of the Cliffs about 10 o'Clock the same Morning; and the Child about the same Time was taken up in one of the Fishermen's Nets, to the unspeakable Grief of the Family.

The Letter Sign'd R. F. is received, and will be inserted in our next.

SATURDAY's EVENING-POST: Or,
UNIVERSAL JOURNAL.

ALTHO' there are various News-Papers already in Publick, we cannot, for the following Reasons, but be humbly of Opinion that there may be still Room for one more. As every Political Paper keeps close to that side of the Question in which it has listed itself, there must ever be something wanting in it to satisfy the Enquiry of every Impartial Intelligent Reader. We have therefore resolved to Publish a Paper every Saturday at Four o'Clock in the Evening, under the Title of the SATURDAY'S EVENING-POST: OR, UNIVERSAL JOURNAL.

In this Paper shall be presented at one View to our Readers, compleat Extracts of the Craftsman, London Journal, and Universal Spectator, on the same Day those Papers are Publish'd: In our Extracts we shall be impartial, and do equal Justice to Mr. D'Anvers, Mr. Freeman, and Mr. Stonecastle; their Arguments shall have their full Weight, and where we find it absolutely impossible to abridge them, and at the same Time preserve their Force and Energy, there they shall continue to speak in their own Words. And to render our Journal compleat, it shall have the Best Foreign and Domestick Advices, with whatever is useful in any other Paper, and frequently some Originals.
